From the Nashville Banner.]

There are over 12,500 miles of railroad in the United States of which the gauge would have to be changed to carry out this whim, viz: 1400 miles north of the Ohio and 11,100 miles south of the Ohio. In addition to having to change one rail, which alone would cost $500 per mile, they would have to remodel all their cars and engines; in fact, they would practically have to replace them with others. This item has cost over $50,000,000. Ninety per cent. of the loss would fall directly on the Southern States. The proposition smells loudly of lobbyism.
